The Hottest Days Of Summer Are Here

The bottle rockets may no longer be soaring, but temperatures are definitely still on the rise!

July through Mid-August tend to be the hottest time of year for us, so it is still important for you to take care of your home with a little extra TLC to get through the peak of summer. That means your roof, too!

Why Is It Called The Dog Days Of Summer?

Turns out the answers are in the stars! The star system Sirius (also known as the "Dog Star") rises into clear view around now.

Being one of the brightest stars in the night sky, ancient astronomers took it as a warning that the hottest parts of the summer were just around the corner. Aside from heat and drought, the rise of Sirius also has been associated with sudden thunderstorms, bad luck, and mad dogs.

So if Fido won't sit, stay, or roll over - you can blame it on Sirius!

We Are Here To Help With All Your

Hot Summer Home Care Needs

Even with all the fun times that come with summer, you can't neglect your routine home care and property maintenance needs. Luckily, with a few simple tips, you can make sure your roof will be ready to protect you through even the hottest days.

- Inspections After Extreme Weather - With hotter, wetter summers means more chances for the elements to wear away at your roof. A roof inspection is a low-cost, high-reward opportunity to remedy small problems before they become major repairs or early roof replacements.
- Gutters Need Attention Too - Incorrectly installed or weather worn gutters can leak and otherwise fail. We can help to assess your current roofing structure in entirety, including your gutters.
