There's some truth to the saying, "Home is where the heart is."

A primary goal for most people is to buy a house and start a family, or buy a house - as a family. However or whenever you buy your house, you want to make it into your home, a place to make memories.

Here are a few ideas on turning your house into a home.

Decorate your walls, but don't overdo it

The real warmth of a room comes from the personal pieces of art on the walls, not just the color. When you hang art from your walls, it reflects your personality. Also, research shows that simply looking at art can reduce stress and give you a satisfying feeling.

For some people, the house they grew up in is their epitome of what "home" really is. So, in that vein, hang art and souvenirs on your walls that remind you of your childhood home. Also, mix in family photos you've been keeping out of sight. The combination of art and photos will let your family's personality shine.

Make it cozy, but keep it clean

You want your home to have a lived-in look. Keeping things organized is essential, but not everything has to be put away or put in a "place." Comfy clutter will give you that cozy feeling, so showcase your hobbies, display flowers, or any other pieces of "flair" that says something about you and the family that lives within the walls.

If you have children that like to color, set up a usable area in your home as their special place, make sure they can access it easily and get to their supplies.

Make your kitchen kitschy, but functional

For many homes, the kitchen is the heart because of all the time that is spent in it. You'll want to make your kitchen into your own space by keeping it both comfortable and usable. Don't hide your appliances or utensils, incorporate them into the kitchen's theme by using them for decoration.

Throw pillows and rugs add warmth

Your living room's furniture can give you a comforting feeling, but adding cushions, throw pillows, blankets, and rugs will give it a "homey" feeling - it will also add personality.

Using leftover fabric to create your own throw pillows will add a unique touch to your living space.

Put a bit of "you" in each room

Giving each room of your home a bit of personality is as easy as just throwing splashes of color on the walls, or just on an accent wall. Each room's color or, splash of color, should reflect the function of the room. For example, a craft room that has white walls can get a bit of pop with an orange accent wall. Orange is known to revitalize creativity.
